The bike had the original Fuji P-Zero tubes and they are still in there. I did an earlier build with the same frame and all was good. I am not sure what I can do other than just put tubes in there. It seems that I will have to just replace those tubes and ride on with my slow plan The only thing I can think of is that the primary tubes may be different than the original. In the video it looked like the outer tube was the same, and the inner tube was a brand new tube. I have a frame exactly like that with no bike so some time I will just take it apart and try to find out which tubing it came with. I don't think it was ever re-equipped. To bad that frame is too tall for you to use it properly. Too easy to crash and tear it up without any aesthetic appeal. I would really recommend getting a dslower asap. Its not that expensive. If you really want to save money, get a yz750 or dl-7.5. The dl-7.5 has a slightly steeper head tube angle but has the wider handlebars. For me, it felt better than the yz750. Check them both out and save money./* * Copyright (C) 2002 Intel Corp. * Created by: Tom Haynes * * Intel PRO/1000 Linux driver for Linux kernel versions
