DataViz ConversionsPlus [Mac/Win]

DataViz ConversionsPlus is a useful application that allows you to convert multiple file types with minimum effort. You can use this tool to identify certain files and to convert them in a format that your computer can open. The main goal of the application is to help you open the items that are not associated with any program from your computer. Weather you do not have the right tool for opening the file or the extension is not correctly registered, ConversionsPlus can help you take a peek at the content. This tool cannot open every type of file but it has a substantial list that includes most of the popular image formats, text documents, archive formats and spreadsheet types. Unfortunately, the list of supported files does not include the RAR archives and the documents saved by recent versions of Microsoft Office. Unlike the default Windows behavior that simply launches a program associated with the file extension, this app analyzes the content before deciding if it can be opened. If you accidentally change the extension of an image, ConversionsPlus can display the content with no problem. When the content is unknown to the program, it suggests opening the file as text in order to get some idea about its content. It has a familiar interface that resembles the Windows Explorer and enables you to browse to a specific folder in order to work with its content. The conversion feature can handle one item at a time or an entire folder with multiple file types. The output format for each category can be customized before stating the conversion. Characteristics of conjugative plasmids carrying the dapA gene encoding diaminopimelic acid decarboxylase. In order to construct a random insertion mutant library of Streptomyces lividans TK24 using a suicide plasmid, pKC112, a conjugative plasmid (pH14) containing the dapA gene (encoding diaminopimelic acid decarboxylase) was obtained. pH14 was stably maintained in the recipient, and the dapA gene was transferred from pH14 to another conjugative plasmid, pJV1. The conjugative plasmid pH14 could be readily maintained in all strains of S. lividans of both indigenous and laboratory origins. In addition, the restriction map of pH14 was determined. Using a combination of this plasmid and a plasmid-free strain, the basic characteristics of pH14 were further elucidated.
