Note If you use the Rectangular Selection tool or the Frame feature, your image is cropped to the frame. (In other words, you can't use the margins of an image as frame.) * Curves (CUR) This controls the overall color of an image, making adjustments to its overall hue, saturation, and value. * Filter (FILT) You can apply filters to selectively change the appearance of an image. Filters give you a variety of effects to enhance an image, such as adding and removing texture, blurring an image, and so on. * Magic Wand (MA) You can use this tool to highlight areas of an image using color settings, and by clicking, you select those areas of an image. You can then paint the selected areas, making them transparent so the background shows through. You can also use the Lasso tool (see below) in conjunction with the Magic Wand.

Q: Could not find a cocoapod that matches (Xcode)! I am working on a project, and following the steps from [This Blog][1] I have configured the podfile that is the following: platform :ios, '8.0' target 'FusionAlpha' do pod "GoogleMaps" pod 'Fusiontables' pod 'GooglePlaces' pod 'GooglePlacesLocal' pod "GoogleMobileAds" end When I run pod install in terminal, I receive the following message in Xcode: Warning: Podfile: failed to get bundle id for 'GooglePlacesLocal/GooglePlacesLocal-iOS' podspec. warning: Podfile: failed to get bundle id for 'GooglePlacesLocal/GooglePlacesLocal-iOS' podspec. How can I solve the problem? A: Replace pod 'GooglePlacesLocal' with pod 'GooglePlacesLocal/Local' as explained here A: You should change the pod name with the version number like this: pod "GooglePlacesLocal" When you will do that you will see this solution. Q: Why the name of a key is not inserted in a dictionary? I have some problems with a python dictionary. I have a process that get a key that I generate by myself and I want to add it in a dictionary, that has a predefined key. First, I want to check if the key is in the dictionary, but I don't want the key to be in the dictionary: it is used just to verify if the key exists. If it exists, I want to add a new value to the key. I have a problem with that, because when the key is in the dictionary, the name of the key is not added in the dictionary. This is my code: def verify(request): if len(request.POST) > 0: name = request.POST['name'] event = request.POST['event'] url = request.POST['url'] title = request.POST['title'] description =

Q: .NET Core + ASYNC/await tests causing infinite task? The following unit test runs for infinity until I manually do a Thread.Sleep() The problem occurs in the await.Task().ConfigureAwait(false); Note: This problem does not appear in.NET Framework. [Fact] public async void wait_a_little() { int max = 1; await Task.Delay(5); for (int i = 0; i Q: Get page_id from file I need to get page_id from request object Usually I got it by URL that is absoluturl() method but I want to get it from file. First approach I found was $page->getId(); How could I get it from file? I want to pass file to var and get id from it. A: If you have an absolute path to a file, you could parse the file's contents and search for the number that's normally used as a page ID. The reason you'd want to do it in-process instead of doing it on the disk is performance. [Prevention of eczema on weekdays and weekends in childhood].
