Size: 2.88 MBRequirements: Windows OS 8.1, 8, 7, Vista, Windows Server, Mac OS X, UnixDownload link: Smartphone users take notice In the business world, it's not unusual to come across people who check their emails on a smartphone while riding their motorcycles. You may have noticed that the cellphones built in to many motorcycle helmets have a separate screen that offers the ability to look up information. With advanced technology becoming more and more common, many companies have jumped on the smartphone bandwagon. Some companies are even offering their services to customers via a cell phone interface. If you own a business and are looking to have your services offered via a mobile phone interface, you are not alone. There are a lot of companies out there that have jumped on the smartphone craze and are now offering business solutions through a mobile phone interface. However, there are a few problems with this technology. The major problem with smartphones is that they are available on a multitude of devices. We are talking about the iPhone, the Android, the Palm Pre, Nokia and the others. If your company has not been able to find the best solution for their business, or if they have made the mistake of using a device that was not designed to help them operate, the results may be disastrous. Most smartphones have a small screen that makes it difficult to read or do anything but very basic tasks. These phones are smaller than a credit card and can't be used for more than a few hours at a time before the batteries die. Additionally, most cellphones have an expensive price tag, which means that companies who purchase a specific model in hopes that they will be able to use it as a tool for business will not be able to do so unless they can pay a large amount of money. This is one of the major reasons that smartphones are not being used to their full potential. The second problem with smartphones is that they have extremely poor battery life, which means that they are not great for performing complex tasks, like word processing. This is another reason why smartphone technology is not being used to its full potential. Companies who own smartphones and want to use them for business will not be able to get their work done. Smartphones are a technology that have come a long way in the last few years. While they have a lot of potential, they are still a technology that needs to be perfected.
